

Missing Frustrations

Your glitter is in my car everywhere.

I tried the Shop-Vac but too much was left behind.

Sticky lip-gloss residue on the passenger seat.

I couldn't remove that either.

You played with the fuzz on the back of my neck,
reminding me to shave.

My tea is too sweet for your northern tastes.

I'll brew a separate batch for you next time.

Your knotty Italian hair, caught in my piercing again.

Nail polish spill on my wood floor I always seem to step on.

Acetone will solve my problem

but I like the reminder of you.